

Repojoki

DXing North America in Repojoki, Finland

DX-season 2023-2024

August 2023 marked the birth of our remote DX site in Lapland, Northern Finland. Repojoki operates 24/7/365, complete with online access and a 1000-meter terminated beverage antenna aimed towards the East Coast of North America (298 degrees).

We are Jari Ruohomäki (JPR), Vesa-Jussi Rinkinen (VJR), and Jim Solatie (JMS). Since the beginning of September 2023, we have been able to monitor the mediumwave band daily. There have been several remarkable signal openings, one of the most notable to Alabama and Mississippi in October, the 17th. The mid-winter season brought us some exotic daytimers, and even though the early months of 2024 were marked by frequent proton showers, there were also some very powerful East Coast openings. In February and March solar storms and proton events continued, but between these storms there were sharp openings for example towards the Carolinas.

Our setup at Repojoki includes three Perseus receivers. Each of us listens independently, choosing to share our findings only at the season's end. This vast spectrum of signals offers so much to explore, and maintaining this element of surprise enhances the excitement. It's far more thrilling to DX when you're uncertain of what you might discover on a given frequency at any given moment.

Below you can see the Repojoki river, as well as the queen of the local herd. And naturally we have added our best DX-catches to date. Each week, we have dedicated approximately 20-30 hours in trying to find new stations, accumulating roughly 600-800 hours per person for this AM season (September-2023 – April 2024). Despite having already verified over 2000 North American AM stations, our drive to discover more remains strong. The first successful AM-season at Repojoki has even increased the appetite.

850	20.1.	0730		WTAR Norfolk, VA. "You're listening to the All New Coast 96-5". Strong signal, and the verie signer explained the reason: "This was your lucky day, as WTAR 850kHz at that time was not operating with its normal six-tower directional antenna system, due to a faulty R.F. switch contact at one of the towers, so it was transmitting non-directionally through a single tower at reduced power of 5kW from the normal 25kW nighttime level. The WTAR nighttime directional antenna system sends hardly any R.F. energy toward Finland, even with 25kW transmitter power, so your chances with the non-directional tower at 5kW were much improved. I repaired the switch problem on the following Monday, so you had about a two-day window in which to catch our signal." RepoR
